

Chapter 2

“Help!” I shouted, banging on the metal door. My chest felt really tight. I had to get out of there before I had a full blown asthma attack, and shouting wasn’t going to help. I searched my pockets for my asthma pump but then I remembered it was in my school bag which I’d left in my English classroom. I tried not to panic which was exceedingly difficult in a situation like this.

I heard footsteps. I hoped it wasn’t Ruby turning round and coming back. I started banging on the door frantically then I heard the lock click and the door swung open and Miss Sheridan was staring at me.

“Olivia, what on earth are you doing in there?”

“Ruby,” I choked, my asthma fully kicking in now.

“Oh dear, where’s your pump?”

“In my bag in the English room,” I said breathlessly.

Miss Sheridan took me by the arm and led me to the English room and got the pump out of my bag and gave it to me. I inhaled it gratefully.

“Thank you,” I said when I’d finished.

“Olivia, you should be more careful, you know you are prone to asthma attacks and don’t blame fellow students for things they haven’t done. As a matter of fact I saw Ruby moments before I found you in the courtyard with Evie and Poppy gossiping with each other. So tell me this: how exactly did you get locked in that locker?”

“I told you Miss; Ruby pushed me in there and locked the door then ran off.”

“Don’t be ridiculous Olivia, Ruby would never do something like that!”

Well, your impression of Ruby is far from the truth, I thought.

“Go to your Maths lesson, you’re late as it is. Come and see me at lunchtime in my office.”

I stormed off. Why does Miss Sheridan always side with Ruby just because she gets perfect marks in every test? I thought to myself. The injustice of it made my skin crawl.

After school I headed home. Mum didn’t pick me up because she works late on a Monday.

“Hello,” Ruby said as she jumped out from behind a Willow tree.

“What now, Ruby?” I replied in a voice as quiet as a mouse.

“It was nice to see you at break time – Not!!”

“Hey where are your side kicks? I said sarcastically.”

“Nunya,” replied Ruby.

“Ha ha, very funny, pretending to be Jupiter North are we?”

“Who?” said Ruby.

Chapter 2

“Oh, I forgot, you wouldn’t know because you can’t read I replied. If you must know, Jupiter North is a character from Nevermoor.”

“Maybe if you didn’t spend so much time with your head in a book you would be as pretty as me,” said Ruby.

“Yeah, yeah.”

Ruby shoved me hard in the back. I tripped, banged my head on the willow tree as I fell backwards and then everything went black.
